Doing Things with Words: an update

Liorah Golomb, Humanities Librarian The University of Oklahoma

The project: a computer-assisted analysis of the dialogue of the American television series Supernatural (The CW, 2005-present)

The state of the project: Not Done

What's Taking So Damn Long?

Numerous false starts in creating the corpora

Lack of any knowledge about corpus linguistics

Finding an appropriate (free) reference corpus

Kept changing my research questions

They kept making new episodes

It's a complicated show!

The Good News

Real corpus linguistics scholars have done similar work

I've pretty much nailed down the questions

Decisions have been made regarding content

Found a great free reference corpus

Writing has begun

It's summer!

And so I asked myself ...

How large is the SPN vocabulary?

How many rare (<n) adjectives, adverbs, nouns, verbs are used?

What are the most and least frequent n-grams (3? 4? 5?)

How has the language changed over the seasons?

And I also asked myself things that required other corpora, such as:

How does Sam's vocabulary compare to Dean's?

How does the language of SPN compare to that of related shows (a sampling; use maybe 5 eps from American Horror Story, TVD, TWD, iZombie)?

What are some of the synonyms, e.g., how many ways to express "to kill"?

How does the vocabulary of SPN compare to American English as spoken in films and tv (SUBTLEXus), i.e., rarest words in SPN cf SUBTLEXus?
